BISHOP'S BULL DOG No. 200

The recent laws enacted in various cities prohibiting the mechanic from carrying saws and other tools projecting from the old style tool box in public conveyances, necessitated the adoption of the suit case box and prompted the invention of the Bull Dog design hand saw, which possesses a twenty-six inch cutting capacity and reduced in length to be carried with safety in a twenty-six inch space. It is especially recommended for cutting heavy lumber and particularly for sawing rafters; its symmetrical lines and even balance permits constant use without tiring the wrist. A trial will convince the most critical mechanic of its efficiency.

Made from high grade alloy steel, highly polished blade, carved apple handle and four polished brass screws. Fully Warranted. Made in both Straight and Skew Backs.
